My dear Miss Risso Platero:

Thank you for your letter of 28 March, which was delayed in reaching me here, where we have spent the last couple of months. Actually, we were away in Rome when your letter came.

I would be very interested in seeing your book of fantastic stories. Since we will be going back to Dublin early next month, it would be best to send it to me there (address as above), if you would care to send it on.

At this moment in my history I have too much translation work to do including several volumes of Unamuno to allow me to promise that I can be of any help. But one never knows, and perhaps I could do a story or two, or find a colleague who would be of immediate use to you.

So please do keep in touch, and thank you for writing. We go to London every summer, and perhaps we could call upon you this summer.

With best wishes,
 sincerely

Anthony Kerrigan
